

Fiserv employees with children of Saksham Daksh

“I see with my hands, feel with my heart”

Such are the moving words of visually impaired children - members of our society who stand neglected. This is not due to the lack of infrastructure or expertise but because of paucity of compassion, human endeavor and the will of the community at large, to structure improvement in the basic quality of life of those affected.

In Delhi, Saksham Trust is one such humble effort that is bringing the light of education to many children who are visually impaired.

Saksham also works as a center for distribution of aids and support material for the blind. As books are a storehouse of knowledge, printed books cannot be used by the blind. To solve this, Braille was invented. However, it is extremely expensive to produce books in Braille.

Saksham has understood this problem and found a solution in the form of Digital Talking Books, a computerized recording of texts identified by a panel of experts.

As schools like Saksham look for support from the community, Fiserv, a Fortune 500 company and the leading global provider of financial services technology solutions, associated itself with the school. Apart from other social causes that the company is associated with, Fiserv employees are involved in teaching, organizing co-curricular activities and most importantly in recording of Digital Talking Books. All it requires is a computer, sound recording software that is provided by Saksham and some time to spare for this noble cause. With a little effort from us, thousands of visually impaired children can benefit from these books.

Fiserv has been supporting social causes around its area of operations and has been motivating employees and their families to give back to the society under its Fiserv Gives Back program introduced to mark 25 successful years of the company. Under this program, 20,000 employees worldwide are volunteering to multiply their positive impact in local communities. They have already volunteered more than 28,000 hours since last summer and are continuing to donate every day. This has exceeded the earlier target of donating 25000 volunteer hours by December 31, 2009. Inspired by this success, Fiserv has doubled its volunteer goal to 50000 hours by March 31, 2010.

“Fiserv is proud of its associates for their commitment towards the local community.
